

Popsicle in the Fire

July 18, 2020

AUDIO

VÍDEO

December 17, 2018. Manaus, Brazil.

sc. 01 That evening, the people saw the second worst fire in the history of Manaus, a city of 2.1 million located in the heart of the northern Brazilian Amazon rain forest.

Images related to text and text animation.

sc. 02 Approximately, 600 houses in a very poor neighborhood were destroyed, leaving 2,500 people without a home and even their personal belongings.

Images related to text and text animation.

sc. 03 By the end of the day, local Adventist churches and ADRA had already served 300 meals and given 500 basic food baskets, clothes, bedding, shoes, and other necessities to those who had lost almost everything.

Images related to text and text animation.

sc. 04 While many residents stood in line to receive help from the church or government for their basic needs, one Haitian popsicle seller thrilled the relief teams with an impressive act of altruism.

Images related to text and text animation.

sc. 05 Even though most of the Haitians living in Brazil struggle to survive as refugees after an earthquake ravaged their country in 2010, this man walked up the line of the survivors, giving away all the popsicles remaining in his box. These popsicles were his only source of income.

Images related to text and text animation.

AUDIO

sc.

06

A small act. A huge impact.

As a modern representative of the poor widow, this man was moved to help others, giving all that God had placed in his hand.

sc.

07

As you return your tithe and give your promise, pray that the lord enables you to imitate Christ, who sacrificed all, even His life, for the redemption and well-being of others.

sc.

08

May we put our desires last and God first.

VÍDEO

Images related to text and text animation.

Text animation.

Text animation.