Sarah and her family live in a country where being a Christian is not welcome. Despite this, Sarah decided to stand up for her faith when she started school. She asked her teacher for permission to have Saturdays off so she could attend church. Her teacher refused and told her that she would have to attend school on Saturdays. But Sarah didn't give up on her faith. She quietly went to church every Sabbath, even though her teacher threatened to expel her.

The following year, Sarah had a new teacher who allowed her to attend church on Saturdays. She was even chosen to plan her class's presentation for the annual talent show. Sarah picked her favorite song, which was about God, and planned motions to make the song's meaning clear. However, the talent show was scheduled for Saturday, which meant that Sarah couldn't attend.

Disappointed, Sarah's classmates asked her what they should do without her leadership. Sarah suggested they pray together that God would work things out. The day before the talent show, bad weather forced the principal to postpone it until Sunday.

Sarah's classmates were amazed and said, "Your God is amazing! Now you can lead us in the talent show!" The performance was a huge success, and Sarah realized that she could share God's love with others just by obeying Him.

NARRATION

CN. 05

In some countries, being a Christian is not accepted, and sharing one's faith can be dangerous. Many Christians become secret missionaries, sharing God's love in places where they are not well-liked. We should pray for these people who work quietly in dangerous places, so that those who know nothing about God can learn of His love and salvation. By returning the Tithe and Promise, we can help plant more secret missionaries in these countries and spread the message of God's love. May we put our desires last, and God first.
