Editorial—Practicing

We continue to see problems in the church because we are not practicing what we believe. We strive for excellence, but we do it just to be the best. We are not content to be good; we are striving to be the best. This is our problem. We strive to be better than the next best, but if we truly believe in Christ, we must be content with our position in life. How can we be content if we are striving to be the best? We can be content if we are living in the center of God’s will, if we are practicing what we believe, if we are content with our life, and if we are content with our position in life.
