After a long day at work in Manado, Indonesia, Mundari decided to treat himself to a massage. He visited a rehabilitation center for the visually impaired and asked if a student could practice their new massage skills on him.

During the massage, Mundari talked with the student about work and life in general. As they chatted, Mundari shared how God had changed his life and quoted several Bible texts. The conversation grew more profound, and by the end of the massage, the student was intrigued and wanted to know more about Mundari's faith.

"We are happy to have the Adventists regularly reaching out to our visually impaired friends here," said a staff member at the rehabilitation center. "These people need to feel accepted and cared for. Their goal is to live independently and be accepted by society. While some organizations visit us once a year, your regular visits tell us that Adventists really care."

NARRATION

CN. 06

But Mundari's ministry is only an example of what God can do through His committed children. By returning our Tithes and Promise, regular and systematic offerings, we can provide spiritual light for those who are still spiritually impaired around the world. May we put our desires last and God first.
