SEGMENT 1

After listening to his professor, Erick Sanchez, a theology student from Peru, was sure that God was calling him to be a missionary somewhere in the world, wherever He would lead him.

SEGMENT 2

Soon after, Erick read an ad requesting a Bible teacher for a mission school in Argentina. He contacted the school and was accepted for the position. Ushuaia [OOSH-WHY-AH], where the school is located, is the southernmost city in the world, with beautiful, cold, snowy weather. Knowing that many Ushuaians struggle to maintain a bare living and are addicted to alcohol or tobacco, Erick prayed that God would use him to change the lives of the people he would serve.

SEGMENT 3

The church planned a stop-smoking program and invited everyone in town to attend, and Erick gave out invitations wherever he went. One cold, wet day, after hours of plodding through the snow, he sought shelter at a hospital. He warmed up but felt too weary to continue walking. Erick left some invitations in the reception area and walked home.

SEGMENT 4

On the opening night of the seminar, dozens of people came. The room reeked with the pungent smell of tobacco, signaling how desperate these people were to stop smoking. Many attended regularly and conquered the nicotine habit. On the final day, the attendees were offered Bible studies if desired. While following up on requests for Bible studies, Erick visited Elena and her son, Jonathan, who had attended the meetings. They were eager to learn about God.

SEGMENT 5

"How did you learn about the meetings?" Erick asked. Elena smiled broadly. "I was waiting at the hospital and saw the invitation to the stop-smoking meeting. We decided to attend." Erick realized that God had used a flier he had left there to reach this family.

SEGMENT 6

Through the influence of the seminars, Elena found victory over tobacco, and her family met Jesus. They studied the lessons and prepared for baptism. By the end of Erick's year in Ushuaia, God had used his service to lead 26 people to God. If Jesus is calling you to serve, whether at home or far away, pray for Him to work in your heart and mind to show you how useful and essential you can be for His ministry.
